The Hunt Institute 2014 Year-In-Review Summary

The year began with the annual Holshouser Legislator's Retreat. The Hunt Institute hosted a bi-partisan group of 60 North Carolina legislators in Greensboro, North Carolina on January 13-14. During the course of two days, policymakers engaged in discussions with state and national education experts on the strategies to improve the effectiveness of teachers and leaders. The sessions focused on topics such as teacher effectiveness and compensation, student assessments, school accountability, partnerships that promote college and career readiness, and the role rigorous standards play in securing North Carolina's economic future. Ed Rust, Jr., chairman & CEO of State Farm Mutual®, delivered the keynote address and emphasized the importance of a strong public education system for North Carolina's economy and ensuring that all students are college and career ready. The concluding keynote was given by Gov. John Engler, president of the Business Roundtable. Gov. Engler discussed the business perspective on education and career readiness.

During the event, The Hunt Institute introduced a special re:VISION, a five-part series on teacher effectiveness. The series explores the complexities of teacher evaluation, compensation, preparation and leadership, and offers considerations for policymakers. Also distributed during the Retreat was Issue 5 of *coNCEPTs – The Institute's state-specific policy primer – which discusses K-12 and higher education collaboration for college and career readiness.

On May 5-7, there was the Readiness Matters | State Collaboration for Success in Atlanta, GA. The Hunt Institute cohosted the event with the National Council of La Raza (NCLR), and the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB). The Readiness Matters conference fostered important conversations about ensuring that English Learners (EL) across the South are prepared for success in college and careers. State teams considered EL demographic and achievement trends, challenges, and opportunities as ELs transition to new college and career ready standards and assessments and strategies for communication and engagement with parents and community members to improve their success. From the sessions, The Institute released a series of vignettes of resource experts – including Dr. Mike Casserly, executive director of the Council of the Great City Schools; Chris Minnich, executive director of the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO); Dr. Kenji Hakuta, Co-Chair of Stanford University's Understanding Language initiative; Kati Haycock, president of the Education Trust; and David Coleman, president of the College Board.

Over the summer, The Hunt Institute released two video series. In June, The Institute featured videos that documented how leading K-12 educators are shifting their instructional practices to develop the critical thinking skills demanded in today's economy and increase interest in science. With a dynamic and accessible format, the three videos provide diverse audiences, including educators, policymakers, and parents with a stronger understanding of how science instruction is transforming to better engage students and prepare them for success in a global economy. The videos, which highlight teachers in North Carolina, are accompanied by a Video User Guide that suggests how to best use this learning tool. A re:VISION on science was released earlier, which also complements the user guide.

In partnership with the National PTA, The Hunt Institute released a series of videos in July to help support PTA's ongoing effort to provide accurate information about the Common Core State Standards. The videos raise the voices of students, parents, teachers, school leaders and policymakers with a particular focus on educator reflections on the value and implications of the new standards. The videos include two main videos that focus on college and career ready standards. Additionally, there are 10 vignettes that focus on specific topics and voices, and a Common Core Toolkit consisting of a variety of materials and resources.

In December, the Hunt-Kean Inaugural Fellows convene in Memphis, TN for the program launch. Seventeen Fellows from across the country will come together on December 3-4. The year-long program will help participants achieve the next stage of growth for their careers by strengthening their knowledge base in substantive education issues and providing useful tools to help Fellows position themselves into becoming effective education policy leaders and champions. The two-day session will focus on the importance of rigorous standards, aligned assessments, and accountability, as well as explore the topic of school choice. The Fellows will also visit two Memphis schools that are part of the Tennessee Achievement School District; have conversations with former U.S. Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings and Gov. Phil Bredesen; and participate in sessions featuring a variety of well-known resource experts in education, policy, and politics. The highlight of the opening session will be a panel of governors moderated by Gov. Hunt. The former governors will share their insight on the session topics and their views on the leadership needed to drive real change at the state level. Over the next year, the Fellows will have the opportunity to receive executive-level, one-on-one mentoring, distant learning experiences, and networking opportunities with the Hunt-Kean Advisory Board - comprised of 14 former governors. The mentors will provide Fellows with relevant point of views as well as guidance on how to achieve their education platform goals. The Fellows will convene again on August 12-14, 2015 in Denver, CO.

Another video series is on the horizon for The Hunt Institute. In collaboration with the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, The Institute is currently developing videos to highlight the goals and methods of Common Core math standards. The five videos will feature commentary from parents, educators, and mathematics experts throughout the country. Each video will address one of five key issues: the developmental appropriateness of the K-2 math standards; grades 3-5 computation; algebra in grade 8 or 9; readiness for calculus; and teaching for conceptual understanding. The goal of the videos, to be released in early 2015, is to dispel myths surrounding the standards and to provide a resource for parents and educators working to implement the standards. The videos will be released early next year.

The Hunt Institute continues to hold a strong presence at various events throughout the year. Hunt Institute officials have attended partner convenings, presented at local and state-level events, and consult groups on state and national levels.

The year is to conclude with the release of The Institute's policy primers: Did You Know? and another edition of re:VISION. Its website is also under going reconstruction. Completion is set for early next year.
